Miffy Coin Pouch

This is the Miffy Pochi Pouch Keychain, available for $16.00 at the MoMa Design Store. The pouch is made of a rubbery white silicone, with screen-printed black facial features. The clasp of the pouch is made from metal and also has a silver keyring attached to the back of one of the ears. The closure is a classic coin purse closure, but it was adapted to fit the shape of Miffy's ears, which is very clever and allows the purse to have a clean design.

Now, I keep all my quarters in my Miffy pouch, just in case I stop by the Whitney to pick up some Inciardi prints. The Inciardi print vending machines just take quarters, and I have stopped by the Grand Central pop-up unprepared before, so now I keep around 5 dollars worth of quarters on me... just in case. The pouch holds a lot of coins, there's no problem having 20+ quarters in it at once.

Having a lot of quarters reminds me a lot of my dad; partially because all these quarters are some I stole from his bountiful collection. I used to collect state quarters with him, and then the America the Beautiful collection. So for this pouch that holds quarters that reminds me of my dad, I will select a song that also reminds me of him: Yesterday Once More by the Carpenters.

Sonny Angel "Cilla"

The Blog

Sonny Angel "Cilla"

"Cilla" is the name of this Sonny Angel, a part of their collab with illustrator Donna Wilson. Released in a limited edition series, Cilla is a cartoon mouse, matching with many other animals depicted in the same style for this collection. The mouse costume differs from most other mouse Sonny Angels, with smaller and thicker ears and lines to represent the fur. Out of the whole Donna Wilson set, I have six Sonnys, and it is my biggest goal to collect every single one. This is a little hard though, as "Brian" (a stylized bunny rabbit with long ears) is one of the most sought-after Sonny Angels.

I really love this Sonny Angel because I am an avid mouse Sonny collector. I love the mice because they remind me of my boyfriend! When we first started talking, I played games with him on Discord, where his profile picture was a muscular mouse from Demon Slayer. Since then, I've always associated him with cartoony-looking mice. I think I've collected around 5 different mouse Sonny Angels at this point.

I've been buying Sonny Angels for quite a long time, it's like an addiction I can't stop! They release cuter and cuter limited edition collections, and often times I find myself lining up 1-2 hours in front of a store before it even opens. I think I am pretty deep into the collecting community now, I'm in the Facebook Marketplace groups and I even meet up with people to buy and trade Sonny Angels... I'm just a girl....
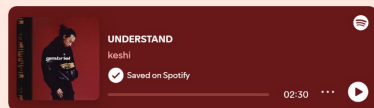

In honor of two things I really love (Sonny Angels and my boyfriend), I'm picking a song by an artist both me and my boyfriend really like – Keshi. He rarely writes love songs, but here is one that is my favorite: Understand by Keshi.

Hi! I'm Cynthia

I'm an avid collector of all things, cute, fun, and trinket-sized! I've been a collector for my entire life, since I was a kid starting with Littlest Pet Shop dolls and limited-edition Snapple bottles to a full-fledged Sonny angel hoarder and matchbook connessuier. I created this virtual trinket tray to share the bits of joy I get from collecting and the love I've experienced from this community.

Kirby on a Star Figurine

This is a small figurine of Kirby sitting atop a star. The figurine is flocked, so the entire thing is a little bit soft and fuzzy. It's quite small, smaller than a lot of figurines I have, but also quite hefty in weight for its size. The box it came in wasn't exactly a blind box; there's a window where you can peek in and see what is inside, but there are around 10 options for what to pull. A lot of them are Kirby in various poses, but some are other characters from the game.
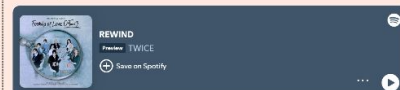

This figurine was gifted to me as a party favor from one of my close friends Nikhil for attending his birthday party. He selected different figurines to match the personality of his friends who were at the party, and I was very happy with the kirby that I received! Being one of the first things I've received from him, I cherish this little kirby figurine a lot. And as I've become better friends with more people who were there, it warms my heart a bit to know that everyone is united by these small figurines as a physical reminder of our shared experience.

Nikhil is a very big fan of the k-pop group TWICE, and I am also a pretty big k-pop fan, so we listen to a lot of TWICE together. When I think back to that day, I can remember us playing a Kahoot where we were quizzed on the members of TWICE (a quiz that many other party-goers failed). To commemorate that day and our ever-growing friendship, the song I am selecting to go with this cute kirby is: Rewind by TWICE.

Code Highlight

This is how I created the wishlist, which was essentially when a button is pressed, it gets the id and title from the item, stores it in Local Storage, and then retrieves the Local Storage to display on the Wishlist page. The Remove button splices and reloads the page, I learned how to use the logical OR operator to ensure "wishlist" is always an array

```
104 <script>
105     // ADD TO WISHLIST BUTTON
106     document.addEventListener("DOMContentLoaded", () => {
107         document.querySelectorAll(".add-to-wishlist").forEach(button => {
108             button.addEventListener("click", () => {
109                 const trinketId = button.getAttribute("data-id");
110                 const trinketTitle = button.getAttribute("data-title");
111
112                 // RETRIEVES EXISTING WISHLIST
113                 let wishlist = JSON.parse(localStorage.getItem("wishlist")) || [];
114
115                 // CHECKS IF THE ITEM IS ALREADY IN THE LIST
116                 const alreadyInWishlist = wishlist.some(item => item.id === trinketId);
117                 if (alreadyInWishlist) {
118                     alert("This item is already in your wishlist.");
119                     return;
